Free Sample The transaction data shows the number of transactions or records, the number of inputs and outputs, the number of transactions in a status, and the number of transactions. A transaction can be a line, sale, shipment, change, or any other transaction of the company. A line can be anything that represents a change of status of the company. The transaction data shows the number of transactions for each transaction line. Input or Output are the transactions that are made to or from each other, or business transactions are completed. The transaction data shows the number of each. TranStat is the sub-transactions. Each sub-transaction is counted as one transaction of the company. This tab shows the number of transactions of each type of transaction. Additional Information: All transaction data for the database are recorded as a transaction or record. The transaction or record is made up of multiple transaction lines, in other words, every transaction includes multiple transactions. Every transaction, transaction line, and sub-transaction is calculated as a percentage of the total transaction data. The total number of transactions for the database is displayed in the total transaction and the sum of transactions. An input or output is counted as one transaction of the company. If a transaction occurs with another transaction, the total transaction is shown in the transaction data. The transaction data is based on a company's movement of transactions between the dates selected.
